Financing Europe's Next Infrastructure Cycle: Growth, Competitiveness and Energy Transition

Europe faces an unprecedented investment challenge. Delivering the energy transition, modernising transport and utility networks, strengthening industrial competitiveness and achieving greater strategic autonomy will require significant long-term capital deployment over the coming decade.

Featuring leading executives from infrastructure and energy landscape, this discussion will examine how companies are prioritising investments, allocating capital and navigating an increasingly complex regulatory and geopolitical environment.

The panel will also explore the role of public-private cooperation, financing frameworks and market conditions in supporting Europe's next phase of sustainable growth.
